Blockchain & Smart Contracts Explained

What is Blockchain?

A shared, immutable ledger for recording transactions and tracking assets — tangible or intangible. Anything of value can be tracked, reducing risk and cutting costs.

Smart Contract Properties

Distributed

All nodes hold a copy — no single party can alter conditions.

Deterministic

Executes only when conditions are met — every time, without variance.

Transparent

Code is visible to everyone on the public distributed ledger.

Why Decentralized Beats Centralized

Centralized Blockchain

Controlled by a single individual or company. Subject to manipulation, censorship, and single points of failure. Authority rests with one entity.

Autonomous

No human intervention required — contracts execute themselves.

Fast Performance

Near-instant execution with zero downtime or interruption.

Secure

Cryptographically sealed and tamper-proof by design.

Trusted

Code is law — immutable conditions

Decentralized Blockchain

Power is distributed across a network. No central authority. Members transact freely without needing to trust any single party — secured by mathematics, not people.
